The Exhibition

A tribute to everlasting love, twin flames, synchronicity, and the Art, Life and Love of Ashraf A. ElHady (1968-2020)

Ashraf A. El Hady (1968-2020)

Ashraf Abbas El Hady, head of the Graphic Department of Minya Arts, was born in Aswan, Egypt. His brush remained warm, overloaded with his expression, hours before his departure, he was hit by a sudden heart attack. More like a Sindbad, his experience in traveling and creativity extended to many countries east and west, which added to his world and visual culture. He studied at the Academy of Arts in Florence, Italy; the Kyoto Institute of Technology in Japan and received a Ph.D. in philosophy of art from Al-Minya. His recent works belonged to the visual literacy, which makes the Arabic letters a unique rhythm. His works have come here as spiritual lights and manifestations. A visual impulse in which the letters swim. He stands, bends and names in the photography space in a trilogy of red, orange and white against a background of calm sky blue. It is the path to light, where it moved from our material world to the world of spirit and serenity. "When we contemplate Ashraf Abbas, we find him concerned, and when we approach him and his experience during the past years, we find the answer. He is concerned with research and experimentation, moving away from the traditional and stereotypical, searching for exclusivity after passing through rugged areas in the art of the artistic edition, starting with prominent engraving and passing through intaglio printing with its multiple technology. The most important of which was the stage of direct engraving with the chisel, and we cannot overlook the last work, which won one of the highest awards of the Egypt International Triennale in its fifth session, in which he flirted with pop art trends without falling into the temptations of form. If in the past and the recent past, he was interested in the classics of technology that carry his rich heritage beliefs. Here he is adding to his graphic repertoire today a new experience in which he discovers a virgin area through which he announces his entry into modernity, so he employs cans of soft drinks that are thrown in the streets, and Ashraf takes them and removes from them what was vague and disobedient. The formations that he creates through this simple unit amaze us with their deep and prominent print, as well as not inked. They amaze us by revealing the hidden. They amaze us by revealing their spiritual and temporal store, which is in fact the metaphysical store of our artist that we celebrate. I think the happiest thing in this show are those printed works that carry and convey all these aesthetic values".

Beth Davila Waldman

Waldman's 2021-2022 "Division Series" is deeply embedded in her empathetic approach of reading landscape considering the historical, social and political contexts from which they are derived. With an archeological approach of discovering material and image that speaks to continuous shifts over time using the language of paint, material, and image, these works allude to the layer concept of being divided with a great pathos for those separated by topographical, cultural and social conditions. Carolyn Yarnell

Multi-disciplinary artist Carolyn Yarnell works as a contemporary classical music composer, painter, photographer and writer.

"Being a visual artist, my music explores color and form through the depths of emotion. Being a musician, in my visual work I draw from the formal techniques and the spontaneity of classical musical composition, incorporating counterpoint, tonal harmony and improvisation to create both linear and vertical depth.

My works are not always clear representations of places or things, they are rather like fleeting frozen moments perceived from great distances".
